

WORTH ITS WEIGHT

The greens at Worthington Manor in Urbana, Maryland, may be the closest thing in Middle Atlantic public golf there is to putting in a major championship. The speed, undulations and condition of the greens is usually better than most tour stops and at their best they're U.S. Open quality, which is why the USGA is a regular visitor for U.S. Open qualifying tournaments. Now you can unwind after a challenging putting round with a massage in the club's renovated 18th century clubhouse. Worthington Manor is again an upscale trendsetter offering everything from a simple Swedish massage to sport specific massage therapy. Every course likes to say it's getting better every year, but Worthington Manor really is.
